PLANS SET FOR GROUNDBREAKING CEREMONY AT KINZUA DAM SITE

Final plans for the ground-breaking ceremonies to be held this Saturday at the Kinzua Dam were made at a luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce Committee planning the affair Tuesday. It was reported that a Tidoute group wished to have the "last" train stop in the river community, but because of the late date, and unforeseen problems that might have come up, no provision was made to have the train add the stop.

The 18-car, 1400-passenger train will leave from Oil City Saturday morning. Those persons attending the luncheon here at Beaty school Saturday morning, which is planned for 11 a. m., will be escorted to the train via Warren City Lines buses. Tickets for the train from Oil City are $5 for adults, and $3 for students.

The committee has limited the reservations for the luncheon at 150. Tickets went on sale Tuesday at the Chamber of Commerce office, and sales will be stopped Thursday noon. Besides the honored guests to be present at the kick-off luncheon, also in attendance will be the Chamber Board, members from Warren Borough Council, the Warren County Development Association, and a limited number of other dignitaries.

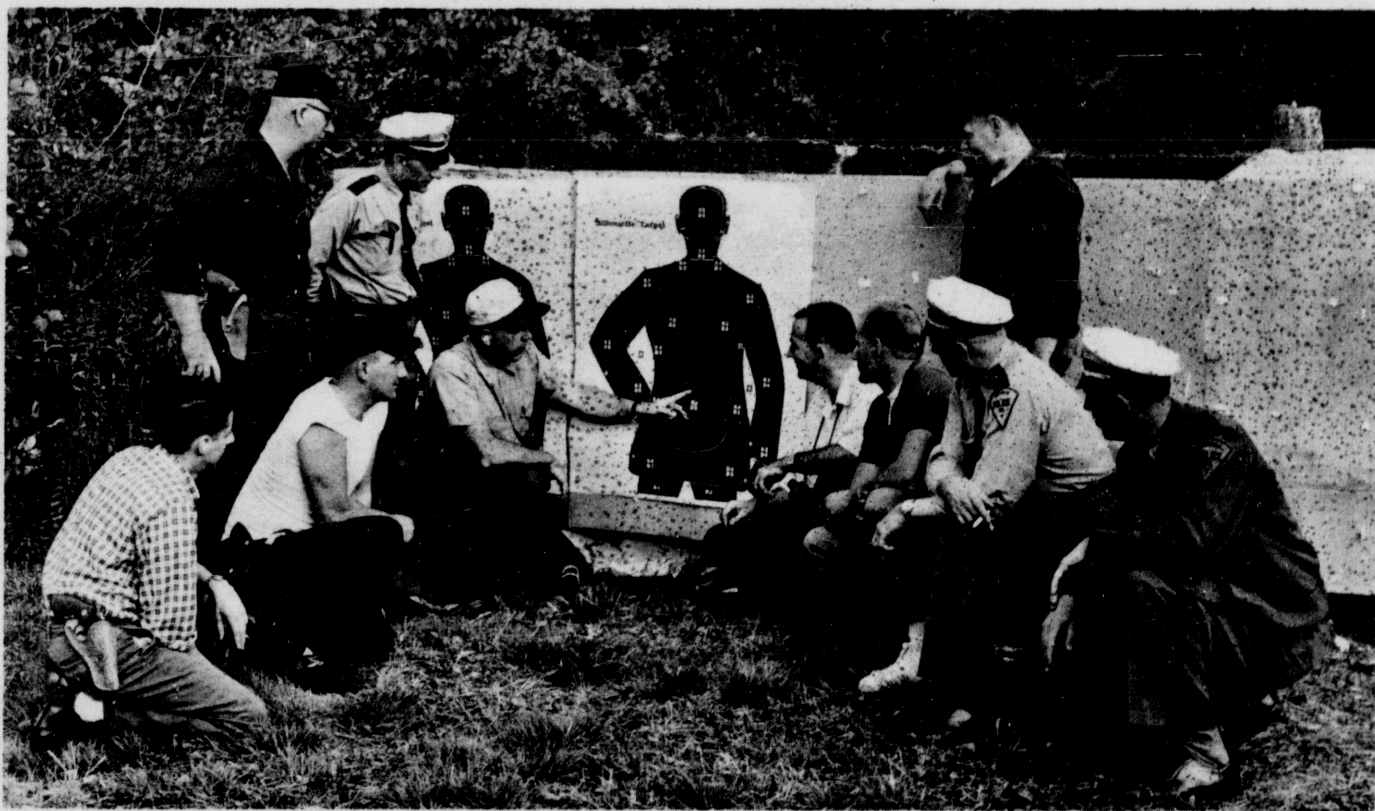

The ceremony at the Reservoir site is slated for 2:30 p. m. with preliminary speeches and the actual ground-breaking festivities with a gold-plated shovel. WICU and WGR television stations, from Erie and Buffalo, and a large contingent of the press will be on hand to record the history-making event.

The main speaker of the day will be The Hon. Wilbur M. Brucker, Secretary of the Army, former governor of Michigan, now a member of the United States Cabinet, who will be accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Brucker. Also present will be Major General Keith Barney, Acting Chief of the Army Engineers; a second major general; a brigadier general;

Colonel Laurie, Secretary of the Executive Branch; and an aide, Capt. Davies.

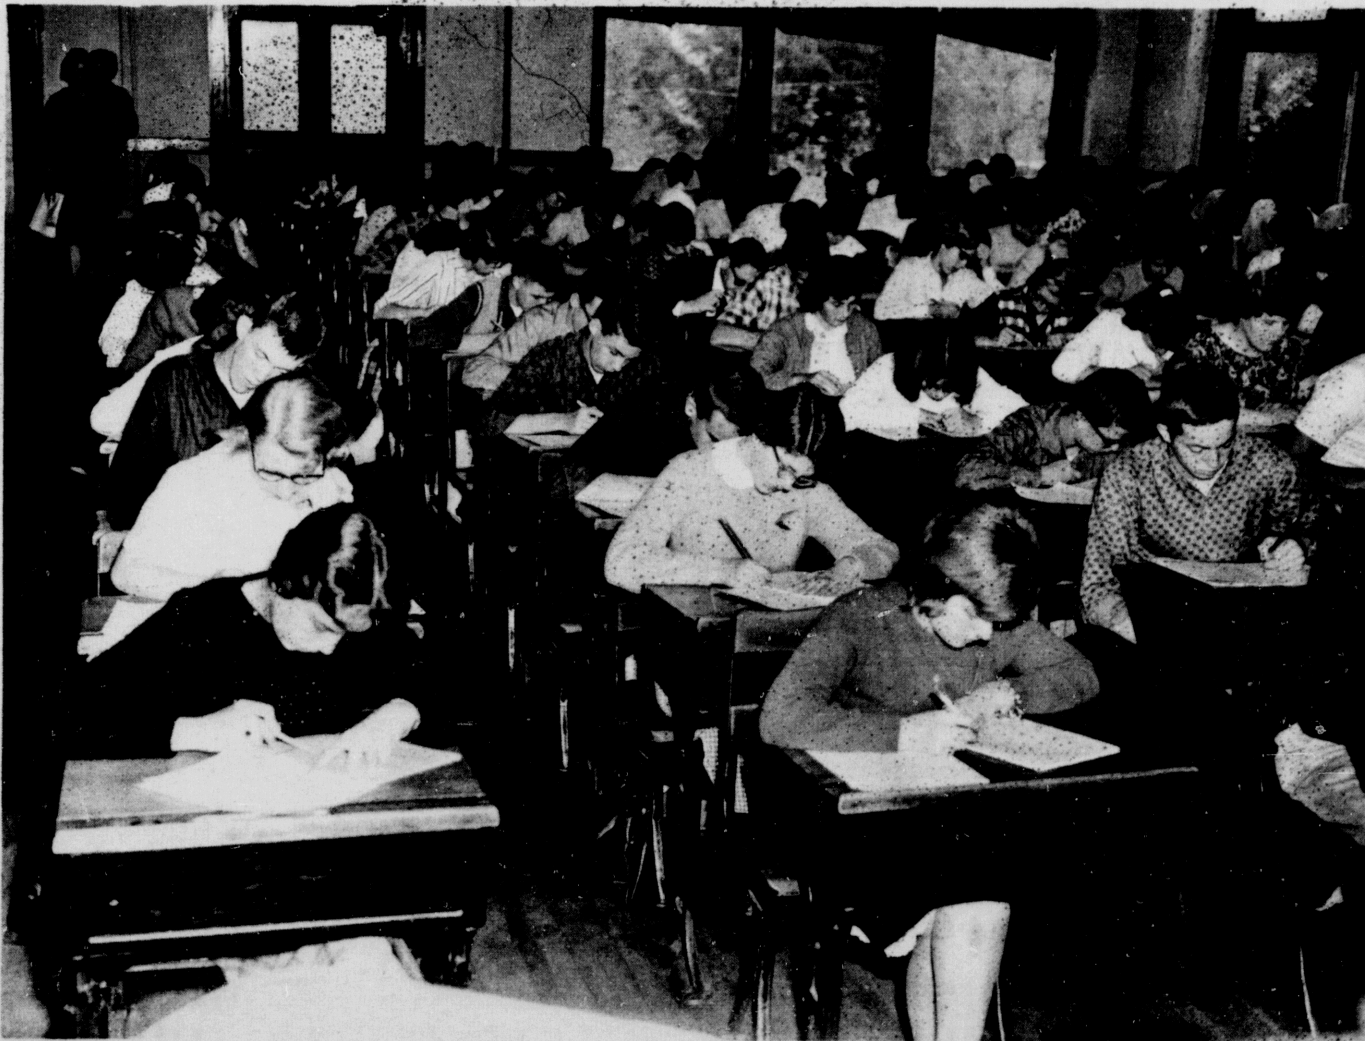

The Pennsylvania state guests of honor will be Governor David L. Lawrence; Secretary of Forests and Waters Maurice Goddard; Richard Heratine, the press secretary; Walter Guisey, the Governor's executive secretary; Senator Hugh Scott; and Mark Kresap, president of Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Each honored contingent arriving here by either train, plane, or automobile will be met by a reception committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

FIRING SCHOOL. The Federal Bureau of Investigation held a police firing school recently for members of the Warren Borough Police and the Auxiliary. The men met at the firing range on Conewango ave. ext. where they were instructed by Bernard Cashdollar, of the FBI's Pittsburgh office, in the techniques of pistol firing from various positions.

Kneeling (l. to r.): Eugene O'Neill, Bob Schmader, Mr. Cashdollar, Bill Fredericks, Roger Sorensen, Geary Bean, and Bernard Winegardner; standing: Don Sandburg, Chief of Police Michael Evan, and Keith Ludwig.

TAKING EXAM. One hundred-thirty-eight members of the Warren high school junior class took the Junior Year College Board exam Tuesday morning at the high school. The test is designed to help the student learn if he or she has chosen the right college and career to follow, and if he or she is qualified to continue into higher education, following graduation from high school.

Casey Stengel, 70, for years manager of the powerful New York Yankees, died last Thursday at 3:30 p.m. of an illness known to baseball fans as the long ball. He had suffered reoccurring attacks of the sickness during the seventh game of the recent World Series, but a Mazerowski version of the dreaded disease caused the famous pilot's expiration.

Stengel was born (with the New York Yankees) in 1949 when that club won its first American League pennant and World Series under his managerial reins. Stengel led the same diamond crew to AL pennant flags and World Series wins in the years 1950-1953. In the ensuing year, Ole Case was replaced at the helm of the World Series winners' managerial position by Al Lopez, of the Cleveland Indians, long an adversary of the aged clubhouse manager.

But the following year (1955) the colorful, jabbering Casey returned to the Series' scene with his Yanks, and after that, in the years 1956, 1957, and 1958, the same team enjoyed the distinction of being in the Fall Classic, and baseball fans were beginning to think the Yanks owned the Junior circuit.

In 1959 Lopez again beat out Stengel, this time with the Chicago White Sox, but this year the old master was back against a formidable Pittsburgh leader in Danny Murtaugh. After suffering frequent ups and downs in his health as the Yankees collected 93 hits in seven games, Casey finally passed away with his blood pressure registering 10-9 or 4 games to 3 in the Pirates' favor.

Local funeral services in his memory were held in Warren Saturday at 11 p.m. from Count's Restaurant, and burial followed in Suppa's Garage cemetery.

HOT ROUND. Fire trucks were rushed to the Conewago Valley Country Club course last Friday afternoon when this pine tree became a ball of fire. The inside of the tree was completely burned out and it would have fallen into the nearby grove of pines with torrid results if the North Warren firemen hadn't brought it and the surrounding grass fire under control.

VIEWS OF SPORT

By Red Smith

ON SAYING SOOTH

NEW YORK -- After the first two World Series games in Pittsburgh, all the Yankees were talking about Forbes Field's Ready-Mixed infield. Maj. Ralph George Houk, the Yankees' coach, said he realized that the washboard surface handicapped both teams equally. "But," he added, "wouldn't it be hell to lose a World Series on a bad hop?"

Which suggests that if C. D. Stengel, the septuagenarian warlock, does bequeath his philters, amulets and divining rods to Houk, the Yankees will not suffer for lack of clairvoyant leadership.

At the start of each World Series, the field of prophecy is always overcrowded by sports-writers messing around with tea leaves, cards and chicken entrails. No forecast appeared in this space, on account of a shortage of entrails. Foretelling the result would have been presumptuous for a guy who hadn't laid eyes on a round bat since May.

However, when the wire services came around polling the press, they were given a cool reply: "Pittsburgh in seven games." This might be described as an uninformed guess, predicated on the suspicion that Vernon Law, Bob Friend and Roy Face might do to the Yankees as Lew Burdette and Warren Spahn had done in 1957. The struggle did go seven games, but it was that pebble on the infield, not the Pirate on the mound, that decided the championship. So, no credit is claimed.

THE PLUM ORCHARD

Much more significant than the grotesque scores, as far as baseball's future is concerned, was the news about major league expansion which broke during the World Series. If the applications by Houston and New York for franchises in the National League didn't inspire some soul-searching in the American League, then conditions in Joe Cronin's lodge are even worse than they seem.

Since the brothers started manipulating big league franchises like the pea in a shell game, the National League has staked out rich claims in Milwaukee, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The American League has sunk its pick into the flintier soil of Baltimore and Kansas City.

Now the Nationals are reaching out for prime territory again, while the Americans sit on a rock and whimper. Houston and New York are plums. Not that Toronto, Minneapolis-St. Paul and Dallas-Ft. Worth are lemons, but for companionship on a desert island would you choose Sophia Loren or Sophie Tucker?

From here it looks as though the only way the Americans could take a trick from the Nationals would be to move into Los Angeles. There, however, they'd either be at the mercy of the politicians who apply the gouge for that horror chamber where the Dodgers play, or tenants of Walter O'Malley in Chavez Ravine if and when that noted philanthropist gets his pie out of the sky.

THE LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN

Chances are it is a fair comparison to say that the men who make decisions for the National League have 20/20 vision and can identify the buttered side of a slice of bread at fifty paces, whereas nobody makes decisions for the Americans.

Only three of the eight American League clubs are operated by men who know what happened to Thursday -- George Weiss, of the Yankees; Frank Lane, of the Indians, and Bill Veeck, of the White Sox. Of these only Veeck is an important stockholder, and in his club the balance-of-power is held by Hank Greenberg.

Boston's Tom Yawkey may know what goes on, but as the years pass he seems to care less and less. Kansas City is represented by a "For Sale" sign. In the Detroit directorship, the natives are growing restless. There are a couple of live guys in Baltimore, but the difficulty there is multiple ownership, a cumbersome evil when important decisions are imperative.

CAPITAL CRIMES

For several years now, Cal Griffith has been pouting in Washington, fretful and restless. If he should seize the moment of expansion as an opportunity to move out, it would cause no rioting on Pennsylvania Avenue, provided the city retained membership in the league.

The majors are morally bound to put big league franchises in four Continental League cities. They would not necessarily be defaulting if they assigned, say, the Minneapolis territory to Griffith and opened Washington to other interests.

One can only speculate about how the American League may deal with these matters, but on one point there is no doubt. Whatever the Americans do, the Nationals will be ahead of them.

Ambassadors' History Long And Awesome

The Harlem Ambassadors, scheduled to appear in Warren tomorrow (Thursday) evening at the Beaty gym, own a history that is lengthy and jammed with interesting facts. Although their team has been formed only recently, it features many of the former greats of the Harlem Globetrotters and new faces that delight audiences all over the world.

"DUCKY" MOORE is the manager of the squad, having played fourteen years with the Original Globetrotters. "Ducky" has played on the hardwoods in 32 countries of the world.

CHICO BURRELL is the great and very unorthodox hook shot artist of the Ambassadors - his specialty being the unusual hook shot from the corner of the court. Chico spent 11 years with the Trotters, and reports indicate that his accuracy with his deadly hook is truly amazing.

Charlie Hoxie, a former Globetrotter, stated once that, "Chico is a better clown than Goose

CHICO BURRELL

Tatum", and that's a strong statement to make.

LEON HILLARD, the successor to the fabulous Marques Haynes, is one of the truly great dribblers of the game, and is tabbed as "a show in himself". Hillard played with the Trotters in 67 countries, and for six seasons was the feature performer.

PAXTON LUMPKIN, an All-American choice in his high school days and later a star at Indiana University, played with the Trotters for three campaigns. He specializes in lofting the sphere through the hoop from the far reaches of the court.

ARTIE DOUGLAS is the spark-plug of the organization, being very small and quick with the hands. He joined the Ambassadors last season after having began the season with the Harlem Clowns, another touring Negro basketball combine. Artie is a deadly left-hander, also being the perfectionist in the long shot.

The Warren County All-Star's lineup is now complete and should present a good account of local talent in the area's exclusive battle against the Ambassadors. The roster now includes the following men, all of whom have distinguished themselves on local and foreign courts: Dick Koebley, Ed (Wink) Rickerson, Ed Lindberg, Bob Burlingame, Bob Kolesar, Don Labesky, Bud Rowland, Hud Berdine, Bill Massa, and Jack Harding.

Dave Bathurst and Jerry Leonard are coaching the locals, but they have yet to announce the starting lineup.

The main attraction will get under way promptly at 8:15 p.m.

Battling in the preliminary will be the faculties from Beaty junior high school here in Warren and the Youngsville senior high. Both squads have been practicing to "get in shape" for the huge Beaty expanse, and indications are that fans should get a real treat watching the teachers in action. The game should be especially interesting for the pupils, of course.

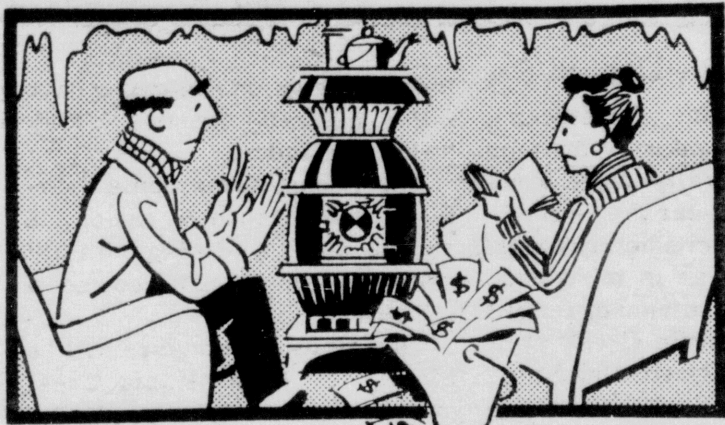

On the Beaty team are Warren Carr, Andy Randas, Paul Myers, Jim Johnson, Dean Passmore, Ron Firestone, Dick Mitchell, Chuck Mullen, Dale Jones, and Pete Smith.

On the floor for the Youngsville crew will be Alan Tubbs, Herb Johnson, Jim Miller, Larry Maraska, Chuck Slosky, Bill Beichner, Dick Swartz, Dave Hilbert, and Chuck Carberry.

The prelim is slated to commence at 7:15 p.m.

MORE MUSKELUNGE

The experiment with stocking muskellunge in waters where they were not naturally found continues and this year the Pennsylvania Fish Commission released 19,904 fingerlings in thirty-one water areas. The number ranged from 100 in Middle Creek Dam to 2,069 in the Pymatuning Sanctuary.

Proof that these fish may reproduce naturally in unnatural waters may be found in the Tionesta reservoir where netting catches muskellunge which are believed to be the young of those placed there six and seven years ago. Authenticated catches in such waters this year included a 32 1/2 - inch musky at Rockville bridge, believed to come from a 1958 planting. A 44 - inch musky weighing 25 pounds was caught at Conneaut Lake, and a 27 - pound, 51 - inch was taken from French creek near Cambridge Springs.

FAST-GROWING DUCKS

If we could grow beef cattle like we can grow ducks, tenderloins would be as common as rabbits. A domesticated duck, and those white ones you see decorating the river in and near Warren are domesticated, weighs slightly over one-tenth of a pound when hatched. They increase their weight by 60 times in the first eight weeks. Which explains why those families in our neighboring waters developed an adult appearance so quickly.

FOWLS LEGAL THIS WEEK

Saturday noon the boys who haunt the marshes, stream banks, and lakes when the ducks, geese, and coots come coasting in will have a legal right to knock some of them down. We say some of them because there are ducks you are not supposed to shoot, and if you would like a descriptive folder, with pictures, write the Fish and Wildlife Service, Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, United States Department of the Interior, Washington.

Quite a name for such a little folder, but it can keep you out of much trouble.

Another "must not" is the use of bait. This means that you can not hunt over fields where grain crops have been cut down, or where grain is present for feeding livestock. This does not include fields where crops have fallen naturally or where they still are standing.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission has much to say on the subject and we offer you its full statement about the season soon to open:

Thousands of shooters will be lured to Pennsylvania lakes, marshes and streams in quest of ducks, geese and coots on October 22, opening day of this state's 1960 waterfowl season. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service reports that duck flights this fall are expected to be approximately equivalent to those of last year. This couples with observations in the Keystone State which indicate prospects for the first day are rather optimistic, duck production in the State having been quite high. The ban on canvasback and redhead ducks this year will have little or no effect on early season hunting. Chief attraction for the first days will be locally-reared mallards, plus blue-winged teal, coots, wood ducks and a sprinkling of other waterfowl.

Seldom will waterfowlers predict the success of a season. A combination of low water and clear weather almost always causes the migrants to pass over. When rivers and marshes are reasonably high and miserable weather and a low ceiling is the fare while flights are on, ducks will drop in and provide many shooting opportunities.

Hunters are reminded that canvasback and redhead ducks are completely protected during the upcoming season. Poor production conditions for the diving ducks in 1958 and 1959 and a decline in breeding stock last year dictated complete protection for these birds this fall. Last year only one of these ducks was permitted in the bag, just in case one was shot in mistake. Still their numbers declined. The Game Commission urges duck hunters to hold their fire until certain that birds in their gun-sights are not canvasbacks or redheads, also until sure that ducks in season are within killing range.

Persons 16 years of age or older must purchase a Federal Migratory Bird Hunting ("duck") Stamp in addition to a Pennsylvania hunting license before gunning for waterfowl. These stamps, issued at post offices, are valid July 1 to the following June 30. The federal money is used to acquire waterfowl habitat, an investment in sound game management. Many non-hunters purchase the "duck" stamp as insurance against further reduction in waterfowl populations--just as good people contribute to any worthy cause.

Pennsylvania sportsmen will have the same length season and general bag limits this fall as last, except that canvasbacks and redheads will not be legal targets. The daily and possession limit for wood ducks and hooded mergansers is one of each. The season remains closed on snow geese and swans.

It shall be unlawful to hunt any wild bird or animal, including migratory game (except deer with bow and arrow) prior to 12 noon, EST, October 22 and prior to 8 a.m., October 29, 1960. Except on these dates, shooting may begin one-half hour before sunrise. On all days of season waterfowl hunting ends at sunset. Sunday hunting is not permitted.

Over most of Pennsylvania the duck - goose - coot - brant season opens (noon) October 22, closes at sunset December 10. The Game Commission has provided waterfowl season summaries and a sunrise-sunset table to post offices in the State, to be issued with every duck stamp sale.

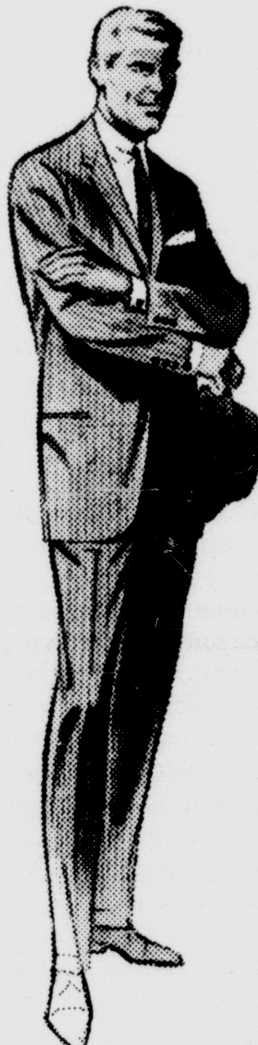

In the counties of Bucks, Philadelphia and Delaware, and on the Delaware River bordering them, the 1960 season shall be: geese (except snow geese) and brant, October 22 to December 20; ducks and coots, November 19 to January 7. On November 19 the starting hour is 12 noon, EST. The protection to certain waterfowl, also other limitations described above, will be the same in this area as on other waters in and bordering the state.

These are some of the important rules to observe: Waterfowl may be taken with bow and arrow. Rifles and handguns are prohibited. Shotguns not larger than 10-gauge are permitted, and repeaters must be plugged to hold no more than 3 shells. It is unlawful to use bait or salt to attract the birds. Artificial decoys are permitted; live decoys are not. The use of electrical calling devices or recordings is illegal.

Lions Blank Improved Dragon Eleven, 12 - 0

The Warren Dragons exhibited their strongest defensive efforts of the season Saturday afternoon against the Erie Academy Lions, but the Lake City eleven took home a 12-0 decision over the charges of Ralph Veights. A small crowd witnessed the Dragons' battle as they held the Erie eleven in the first half, but weakened considerably in the final two periods, yielding two scores to their opponents.

The Blue and White now have season's record of two wins, three defeats, and one tie. They will go after their first independent win of the campaign this Saturday evening against the Ridgway Elkers at the latter's home field.

Warren and Erie exchanged punts on their first series of play from scrimmage, but the Blue and White then managed to penetrate the enemies' territory, moving to the 24 before they were stopped on downs. With speedster Jerry Ward carrying the bulk of the load, the Lions moved out to their 44-yard line before the Dragons again stopped their drive. The locals then posed a serious threat to score when a Wooster-to-Green aerial brought them to the Erie 15. Pat Hartnett and Dave Green were both stopped on runs behind the line of scrimmage before Warren was forced to give up possession of the pigskin to the visitors on the 12-yard stripe.

The second quarter of play was a nip-and-tuck affair with neither team able to concoct a sustained drive. The Blue and White did, however, put on a brilliant goal line stand, thwarting an Erie drive which began in the latter part of the first quarter. The Lions had moved the ball to the Dragons' 6 for a first-and-goal situation. Quarterback Cermak plunged to the four, and Fullback Freddy Delfino smashed on two successive plays to the one-foot marker. On fourth down, the courageous Warren line battered the charging Lions, and pounced upon a fumble to stop the effort.

Erie was forced to punt after taking the second half kickoff, but they regained possession of the ball when the Dragons fumbled on the Erie 45. From that point the visitors marched to the Warren goal with Delfino lumbering into the end zone from the two-yard-line. Ward's point after attempt was no good.

Green returned the kickoff to the 37, but on three plays the Lions again held the Warren eleven, and Green had to punt the ball out of danger once more. Erie took over on their own 18 and moved for a set of first downs before Barry Johnson came up with a supreme defensive effort to stop the Lions on their 37.

The fourth quarter was much the same as the preceding one with Erie outchargin' the Dragons, and doing some good blocking and running on their own part. Warren had possession of the ball twice, but drives failed to materialize due to the efforts of the Lions' line. Midway in the quarter Erie added the insurance touchdown with Cermak scooting eleven yards around end. The drive started on the Erie 42, and Ward promptly moved the ball deep into Dragon territory on runs of 15, 14, and 13 yards. Delfino brought the ball to the Warren 11, from which point Cermak dashed around end for the TD. Ward was again stopped short of the goal for the PAT attempt.

SIDELINE SHORTS: Dave Green very noticeably carried the burden for the locals as Hartnett and Reynolds were used sparingly...the halfback's one-handed grab of a lateral in the fourth quarter was a marvel... Quarterback Johnny Wooster was taking a severe beating in the second half as the Lions' line was walking through the Dragon blockers... Fans appreciated the defensive efforts of the locals in the first half of play as they applauded graciously each time the Blue and White came through with a bruising tackle or a "gang" tackle to repel Erie's attack.

EAST AURORA TRIPS DUKES, 20 TO 6

The East Aurora Bills, still untied and undefeated in Western New York Semi-Pro Football conference play, kept a victory string alive Sunday evening as they downed the Jamestown Dukes, 20 to 6, before a small crowd at Municipal Stadium in Jamestown. The Dukes must register a win over the Niagara Falls eleven next week to take a fourth place and a play-off berth in the loop.

The Dukes held the Bills at bay for the first period, and it was not until a few minutes before halftime that the Bills produced their first touchdown after a sustained drive. They added a second TD in the third frame with Don Len climaxing the drive with a short buck.

Jim Tinelli connected on two important passes to lead the Dukes to their only score in the final period of play. He hit Lou Peterson with an aerial on a play which took the Dukes to the Bills' 24, and later passed to Red Moran to the opponents' 7. Lou Peterson tallied the six-pointer with a two-yard plunge.

LET'S TALK SPORTS

FRANK FILES! the popular former sportscaster of WNAE, was mentioned in the telecast of the Browns-Cowboys game last Sunday on Channel 12 . . . Frank was doing the broadcast of the game for the Texas station.

JERRY WARD, the Lions rambaging halfback, was a surprise to the Warrenites as they expected Academy's star runner, Tom Gates, to be wearing the No. 33 which Ward had on . . . we wonder if the Erie coaching staff was trying to pull a "fast" one. Ward certainly impressed the fans with his speed and agility while Gates was limping around the playing field in dress clothes.

THE DRAGONS, particularly the defensive unit, must be congratulated for their fine job against Erie Academy . . . the tackling was low and hard and was a real treat to witness. Barry Johnson, Dave Green, Ron Seder, Dick Barrett, and Rich Occhuzzo stood out, but all the Blue and Whites did a commendable job.

THE DRAGON BAND put on a real non-partisan display at half-time in an attempt to get the people to vote on Nov. 8 . . . but who are these political parties, the Democrats and the Remocrats, that were displayed on the signs.

THE KANE WOLVES, under their new coach, Bob King, certainly are establishing themselves as a football powerhouse in the area this season . . . Saturday they mauled the Bradford Owls, 48-6. Warren faces the undefeated Wolves on Saturday, Oct. 29 in Kane . . . the date is also the opening day of the small game hunting season. Any connection?

JACK HARDING, one of the hoopsters that will play with the Warren County All-Stars against the Harlem Ambassadors tomorrow (Thursday) evening, is making his first appearance on local hardwoods . . . Jack is a State Trooper and is very anxious to get into the local action. In practice Monday and Tuesday evenings, he worked very well under the boards and displayed an accurate jump shot from around the key.

INTEREST GENERATED by the appearance of the Harlem Ambassadors is truly amazing as the "bucketball" season is still many weeks away. We understand several coaches from the area are planning to bring their teams to see the action tomorrow evening, and it should be an excellent chance for the schoolboys to see top basketball action.

What a way to usher in the season here in the county!

Observer's New Press Arrives . . .

GATEWAY? The channeling and dyking project which will protect Glade Run residents from gouging flash floods has one curious spot. It drops off several feet to let the highway come through. Naturally the dyke is higher than anticipated trouble, but if we should have an unusual rise does this mean that much of it will come rushing down the road and through the protected properties?

A new offset press arrives at the Observer office. If all goes well today's paper will be produced by the new machine which is capable of three colors on both sides. With an automatic

Bookmobile Response Is Rated Excellent

With the Warren County Bookmobile having completed six weeks of its fall schedule, County librarian Isabel C. Potter reports service to county residents is proving most successful.

The new bookmobile schedule includes stops at various county schools where the response is being called excellent. The main emphasis in the county library program is being directed to service adults, and the schedule includes stops in the majority of the communities visited during the summer.

Bookmobile circulation for the four months the vehicle has been serving county residents has passed 19,000. This includes adult and juvenile fiction and non-fiction, recordings and periodicals from the total collection of approximately 11,000.

Registration of new county patrons has also increased since the county library system has been in operation. Current statistics show there have been 4,147 additional registrations, slightly over 7% of the county population.

Bookmobile stops for the remainder of this week have been announced by Mrs. Potter as follows:

OBSERVATIONS

By Bob Walsh

MEDICAL ASSISTANCE TO AGED INSUFFICIENT

The bill providing medical assistance for those over sixty-five which recently was signed by President Eisenhower is so far short of the real need that it can hardly be considered even a healthy step toward a realistic program. In Pennsylvania it will do much less for many of the aged than is true in other states which have more heart in their public assistance act than is the case in the Keystone commonwealth.

The help from this program amounts to no more than $12 a month above the $65 former maximum provision we allow under public assistance. And we would receive only fifty per cent of the $12. Inasmuch as Pennsylvania pays only $3.50 a month for medical help over the $65 subsistence, we will receive only fifty per cent of that $3.50 as a help from Washington.

When you multiply this by 50,000 persons now receiving old age assistance it comes to a mite over one million dollars. But when you cut it down to the individual it is nothing.

We also pay reimbursements directly to hospitals. But federal funds are paid only to states on the basis of their old age assistance program, thus we lose any funds that would be due us if this hospital aid were syphoned through public assistance. It is estimated that this would get us another $800,000 a year.

There also is another $1,700,000 lost because we do not have a proper medical assistance arrangement for the aged. This involves fifty per cent of the money we pay hospitals for care of those who are not eligible under our old age assistance.

Obviously these revelations, and other inadequacies of our state system which can be exposed, suggest that we have some legislating to do if we are to obtain our fair share of the federal help. And we are paying taxes to provide those funds.

Under our law it is probable that anyone receiving help for medical assistance will need to prove that they have no children who can help pay the bills. They also will be subject to liens on their property which will be filed after the recipient and his (or her) spouse has died. The federal law prohibits the state's policy of filing such a lien during the recipient's lifetime, but does not prevent it from being done after the recipient's death.

We can go on with these restrictions and the unpleasant twists to our Pennsylvania public assistance law, but we believe that even if we correct the state regulations to gain the maximum help, the federal law is a mistake. We say it is basically wrong and impractical.

In Pennsylvania alone we are spending millions for help that is far too limited. And it is help that comes out of all our pocket-books!

So why criticize a practical approach on an insurance basis that can be done through social security. This would assure all people of help when they are over sixty-five and the money would be there for their use at a weekly cost of pennies down through the years.

Certainly this is a form of taxation. But it is a practical form that assures adequate protection. There is no fussing over recovery of funds from liens on homes. There is no drain on young couples who may be having a difficult time paying their own bills and can be placed in financial straits from which they never will recover through heavy medical and hospital bills for an aged parent who is not eligible for adequate help from the federal bill.

You can come back with the suggestion that we can obtain such insurance now through private firms. But will we? There will be millions who will not, and they will prove a financial burden to the nation at a later date.

The present law is insufficient, is impractical, and lacks heart. America is sufficiently wealthy to afford a national insurance program under its social security law to assure that all people will have medical and hospital care when they no longer can earn a living.

It will come to this some day. Why not start it now? Why play politics with the future health of our nation? Why permit officials to play such politics?

"America is a land where a citizen will cross the ocean to fight for democracy—and won't cross the street to vote in a national election."—Bill Vaughan.

Cold War Timetables

An Honest Man

By Inez Robb

This is a nation in which anything you and I can do, some other feller can always do better. Recently I wrote that I had seen everything in chain letters. But I couldn't have been more wrong, or, maybe, pessimistic.

Because my desk is ornamented at the moment with the most optimistic chain letter of them all, one that aims big and thinks bigger. And I'm kind of sorry that I didn't think of the idea first.

Here is a young man, John Anderson, 27, of Marietta, Georgia, who has set out to make himself a millionaire by begging contributions from -- but let him tell his own story.

"I am going to prove that it is possible for a young American to make $1,000,000 by honest begging," Anderson says, and says it in no handwritten or mimeographed letter but in a smart three-page white and gray brochure.

"While begging is not a new idea, my idea of honestly begging for a million dollars is," he and his brochure continue. "The attaining of my goal has become a challenge to me because of the complacent response I have received from friends and relatives, people who don't think as big as I. They keep saying it can't be done."

"The money you give will not be tax deductible, since you are giving to a cause that has no cause except to make a millionaire. The money will only make my life more enjoyable.

"This brochure describes a unique, dynamic young man who is determined in attaining his creative goal. Remember, I need your help. Put your money in the mail today."

"The sooner you send the money, the sooner I will be a millionaire. Remember, actions speak louder than words. A check in the mail to me is worth more than a blank one on your desk."

Anderson, in the best Presidential campaign fashion, lists his platform. Under "What I Am For" he lists "Mother's Day, the Fourth of July, sex, little children, peace, Christmas, honest government, democracy, money, more money, slum clearance, married love and honest begging, or what I am doing."

Under the heading "What I Am Against" Anderson lists "Sin, crooked politicians, communism, Mother-in-law's Day, underpaid school teachers, poverty, fat women wearing shorts in the supermarket, peanut butter sandwiches and mixed rest rooms on airplanes."

A section labelled "Why You Should Give to Me" lists as reasons: (1) So I can travel the world and show people that in America even a beggar can be a millionaire, (2) eat squab, drink good champagne, eat steak for breakfast, (3) drive three cars instead of one, (4) own a winter house, summer house and town house, (5) have FUN, travel, education and entertain poor kin-folks, and (6) start my own business; supermarket credit cards."

The brochure includes a picture of Anderson and his family, which consists of a charming wife and four delightful kids, or, as he explains, "four more good reasons why I need a $1,000,000."

He promises donors of $25 that they will receive "one trading stamp;" $50 rates "one trading stamp, framed;" $100 will get an autographed picture of Anderson; $500 makes the giver an honorary member of Millionaire Association; $1,000 makes the giver co-chairman of the board.

Also, Anderson wants to make it possible for you and me to "enjoy the immense pleasure of helping someone personally and directly."

You know, I wouldn't be surprised to hear that Anderson has eventually begged his first million. There's something mighty appealing about a young man who says bluntly in print, "I want to start at the top of the ladder. The bottom is too crowded."

To the ease now enjoyed by those benefiting from automatic washers you can add the pleasure of dry cleaning in the same way. Put in your pants and they come out clean and unwrinkled. What you stand around in, meanwhile, may depend on the ingenuity of the enterprising coin box entrepreneur.

ENCYCLOPEDIA PRICES ARE FALSE SAYS FTC

Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc., 425 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill., would be required by an order by a Federal Trade Commission hearing examiner to stop using false pricing, savings, and limited-time-only claims to sell its Encyclopaedia Britannica or other books, services or merchandise.

THIS IS NOT A FINAL DECISION OF THE COMMISSION AND MAY BE APPEALED, STAYED, OR DOCKETED FOR REVIEW.

The examiner, John B. Poindexter, found that the prices quoted for a "combination offer" in the publisher's promotional material and by its salesmen are not reduced as represented, but are the regular retail prices for the items.

The concern deceptively claimed the offer was for a limited time only when it is regularly available at the same prices and terms, he added.

The combination offer includes the 24 Volume set of Encyclopaedia, the 2 Volume Britannica Language Dictionary, the Britannica World Atlas, a bookcase, the Library Research Service, and Britannica Book of the Year. The items involved in the basic combination are the encyclopaedia, year book and research service. To these may be added one or all of the other articles.

The purported regular price of $511.50 for a typical offer described in material furnished to salesmen "is fictitiously padded in the amount of $120.00 since the purported reduced price of $373.00 does not include anything for the Year Books," Examiner Poindexter said.

The publisher's brochures also represented that its Encyclopaedia Britannica in the Red Royal Binding regularly sold separately at $414.50, but the actual regular retail price of this set was $294.50, "as shown by respondent's price list, XC-22B (Commission Exhibit-22B). Respondent's representations of discounts and savings are false," the examiner ruled.

"There are no actual savings to purchasers," he continued, "and respondent's regular retail prices of the various 'combination offers' are shown on CX-22A and B. With the exception of the price of the Encyclopaedia Britannica in the Blue Levantex binding, the prices contained in CX-22A and B have been the same since 1949. Respondent's salesmen are not permitted to deviate from the prices set forth in CX-22A and B. Accordingly, it is found that the prices quoted by respondent and its salesmen for the Encyclopaedia Britannica either singly or in combination were and are not reduced prices but are the usual and regular retail selling prices for said books, services singly or in combination and do not afford savings to purchasers."

Nixon's Next Three Weeks

By Marquis Childs

WITH NIXON CAMPAIGN. -- An observer who traveled extensively with Vice President Nixon in the Congressional campaign of 1958 recalls an incident that throws light on his position at this climactic point in the race for the Presidency.

At an early background breakfast for correspondents touring with him he said that in the heat of a contest with pressures from every side he invariably found himself taking stands more liberal than his normal outlook.

Today, as the Presidential campaign warms up, Nixon is being pushed rapidly toward the right. Increasingly as he applies such shibboleths as "war party" and "appeaser" to the Democrats and his opponent, Senator Kennedy, he is moving over onto the side of those in the right wing of his party who have always given him his principal support.

A striking instance of this is his shift on the Connally Amendment restricting American acceptance of the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice at The Hague. President Eisenhower has several times called for repeal of the amendment as had Nixon. Such Nixon backers as Charles Rhyne, former president of the American Bar Association, have made it a cardinal point in their appeal for the rule of law in the world.

But at the same time the old isolationist, nationalist forces on the Republican right have been sharpshooting at Nixon for joining with those who would sacrifice any smallest share of America's sovereignty to a world court. And so a week ago Sen. Barry Goldwater, the darling of these forces, let it be known that the Vice-President had altered his position. This was done through a letter sent to those inquiring about his stand on the controversial amendment.

It is the kind of letter that lawyers can happily con over in interpreting its possible meanings. The layman, however, will be somewhat puzzled by language that says:

"I believe the Connally Amendment should be replaced by a new reservation which should be so phrased that the declaration will not apply to disputes which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of the United States of America. With such a declaration we will protect our sovereignty through protections that the Connally Amendment does not give and at the same time strengthen our world position by taking the leadership in indicating our willingness, under proper safeguards, to settle our disputes with other nations through the rule of law rather than resort to force."

But if this is a significant indicator of the shift it is comparatively unimportant when put alongside the way in which progressively Nixon has imputed deliberate appeasement to Kennedy on the Quemoy-Matsu issue. He began by saying that he knew his opponent's aims were the same as his -- peace without surrender. With increasing intensity from stop to stop that has become something quite different.

The Vice-President went a long way in that direction when at the rally at Buena Park this week he said: "But we left that policy of retreat and defeat (the loss of China, the Korean War) behind in 1953 and we're not going back to it in 1960 as Senator Kennedy has asked..."

Reasons for the shift that is taking place are not hard to find. The prospect is for a much closer race than the Nixon strategists had anticipated. Polls, both private and public, showing a large proportion of Catholics who formerly voted Republican switching to Kennedy in the big-city states have caused acute concern. Some observers believe Nixon's major objective with his growing insistence on appeasement, Korea and surrender is to try to hold these voters and win back the waverers.

Whether it be called realism or cynicism, Nixon's own view of the outlook at this point can be summed up as follows: he believes that roughly 20,000,000 voters are still undecided. Of this total perhaps a million could be classed as "sophisticates." They will concern themselves actively with the issues and one gathers that in any event the Vice-President would write them off so far as his own cause goes.

The other 19,000,000 are his target and they are to be won and held not so much by words, although strong words help, as by the creation of an atmosphere of confidence. On television you look them squarely in the eye, you speak firm generalizations in the tone of one who knows and can do, you give them over and over the same precepts. And thereby you do what is most important of all -- convince the undecided voter that you are not the man to be wakened in the middle of the night by that telephone call from the strategic command and respond by pressing the panic button.

This is a simplified -- perhaps an oversimplified -- view of the next three and a half weeks as seen from the Nixon watchtower. But as practiced by this highly successful practitioner politics is an elemental trade.

Matter of Fact . . .

A JOURNEY TO THE WELL

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON. On the stump in the South, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas frequently and emphatically extolled his Democratic running-mate as "a man you'd go to the well with."

This description of Sen. Kennedy for a long time mystified just about everybody. Members of the Johnson staff were only able to report that "it was the highest compliment you could pay another man in Johnson City, Texas." But at the end of Johnson's southern safari, the mystery was plumbed by anti-quarian research, which was in turn confirmed by Sen. Johnson.

Indian warfare, so remote from most of us, is close to being a living memory for Lyndon Johnson and Johnson City. Still standing there, are the stone forts the Senator's grandfather built. And a "man you'd go to the well with" is a man with the coolness and courage that were needed to lead a sortie to the well when the home-place was besieged, and water had run short, and the braves of the war-band were lying in wait for their last attack.

Once you understood it, hearing this echo of the infinitely distant American past was an oddly agreeable experience. It had its own extra shade of modern meaning, too, because of its hint of Johnson's conception of his partnership with Kennedy, which almost no one expected him to accept.

At the mid-point of the campaign, a final assessment of the Kennedy-Johnson partnership is of course impossible. But it is at least possible to make the point, which badly needs to be made, that Kennedy's decision to form this partnership was one of the wisest decisions of his career.

The wisdom of the offer is proven by Johnson's motives for accepting the offer. He accepted, in fact, because this was the only way to prevent a sanguinary civil war between the North and South within the Democratic party. If he had not accepted, the civil war would have broken out immediately, and Johnson himself would have been cast, quite unavoidably, for the role of the new Jefferson Davis.

Being a nationally-minded man, Johnson did not want that role. Being a nationally-minded man, Kennedy did not want the civil war. In addition, Kennedy did not want to make the kind of extreme, A.D.A.-style campaign that he would have had to make after a north-south civil war had broken out. So the partnership was formed, with the senior politician generously taking the lesser place.

No one who watched Johnson in action in the South could doubt that the partnership has already borne good fruits for the Democrats. The crowds, the speeches and the other surface aspects of his whistle-stopping tour from Virginia down to Florida and across to New Orleans were not the indicative features. To find the indicative features, you had to elbow your way into the two club cars hitched on to the train next to Johnson's own private car.

From early morning until late at night, these two cars were continuously receiving and discharging groups of local politicians ranging in rank from Senators and Governors down to sheriffs and County Commissioners. Johnson worked over them all in the famous Johnson manner. His message for them was, "The band-wagon is rolling; get with us." And they understood the message.

Each day of the trip brought someone into line. In Florida, it was Sen. Spessard Holland.

In Alabama, it was the Democratic National Committeeman, Eugene Connor. But the count of individuals mattered much less than the central fact, which is curious indeed.

The fact is that despite the strongest Democratic civil rights plank any party has ever offered, the Democratic organizations of the Southern states are now more solidly united in support of the Democratic ticket than in any national campaign since 1944. Former Gov. Allen Shivers of Texas is the solitary southern politician of any note who is actively working for Vice President Nixon. Even Sen. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, while himself refusing to endorse the ticket, is not working against it, as he has done before. Instead, he is allowing the Byrd organization county chairmen to go to work for the ticket if they choose.

This result would not have been possible, if the leaders of the Southern Democratic organizations did not scent a chance of victory. The great turn came after the first television debate, and the subsequent indications of a trend in Sen. Kennedy's favor. Hence Sen. Kennedy has made his contribution. But Sen. Johnson is still the real architect of this southern organizational unity, which promises a big payoff in southern electoral votes.

had the advantage. However, on radio, observers have felt Vice President Nixon won out, even in the first debate where appearances loomed very large on TV and, of course, didn't count at all on radio. The radio audience, while far smaller, is still considerable. To the first debate, 17,100,000 persons were estimated to have listened on radio as opposed to 69,000,000 who saw and heard it on TV.

The third debate I listened to entirely on radio with the television turned off and I must admit it's a different show. Nixon comes across far harder, seems more confident (or maybe he WAS just more confident) and more relaxed. Of the two, Kennedy seemed more tense. Kennedy hasn't the breath control of Nixon and this is far more noticeable on radio than on TV. He talks too fast on both TV and radio, but again, it's more noticeable on radio.

Radio itself has a clarity of purpose that contributes greatly to the expression of ideas. Personality is still important but not over-ridingly so. Above all, personality and looks are not the distractions they quite clearly are on television.

However, just as debate goes, this last one struck the lowest level so far. I recall in an excess of optimism writing after the first debate that this kind of political forum ended forever so the sort of arrant Fourth of July demagoguery of past campaigns. I should have had more sense.

Both candidates were indulging in arrant demagoguery over Quemoy and Matsu. Nixon waved those two islands like a flag bearing the strange device Excelsior. Senator Kennedy said -- not once but several times -- that the islands weren't worth "the bones of a single American soldier." Nixon closed the debate with the stirring words: "The way to win is not to retreat and not to surrender." Quemoy and Matsu are getting to slogans and the debate over them is being used in the time-tried political way of inflaming emotions rather than enlightening minds.

Nixon also struck a blow on behalf of mothers and of children, expressing the hope that: "Mothers and fathers could look at the White House and say there is a man who maintains a standard I'd like my child to follow." Senator Kennedy, conceivably struck speechless by this bold stand, didn't disagree.

Kennedy struck the first spark of humor -- at least it sounded funny on radio -- with the observation: "I always have difficulty recognizing my position when it is stated by the Vice President." However, in general -- whether radio just has that effect on his voice or whether it was just this round of the debate -- Kennedy sounded frequently quite angry and, for the first time, on the defensive.

The range of the questions was much narrower than in the previous two encounters and the amount of sheer information I thought was far less. Even on those questions that were asked, the amount of emotion rose while the content of enlightenment fell.

As far as radio went, Nixon clearly won this round.

PURSE SNATCHER SOUGHT

Borough police are searching for a middle-aged man with blond hair who snatched the purse of Mrs. Frank Seceniquia was walking south on Conewango ave. near McPherson st. when the man began to follow her, and later rushed up and took her purse.

Mrs. Seceniquia screamed for help, and her calls were answered by Eugene Manfrey, 711 Conewango ave., who gave chase to the assailant, but lost him in the neighborhood of McPherson.

Although no money was reported stolen, the purse did contain a number of personal cards of Mrs. Seceniquia.

CAMP BREAK-IN IN SHEFFIELD TOWNSHIP

A camp owned by Angelo Thomas, of Erie, was broken into sometime between Oct. 9 and 15 by vandals who smashed in the back door to gain entrance. The damage was discovered by the owner on Oct. 15, and he reported that a .22 caliber rifle and several bottles of beverage were taken.

The camp is located in Sheffield twp. and Deputy Sheriff Richard Heggerty and Sheffield Chief of Police Steve Hoden investigated the break-in.

GARLAND MISHAPS

Two auto accidents occurred near Garland on Route 27 during the past week end, one happening Friday evening at 5:05 p.m., and the second on Sunday at 5:10 p.m. Drivers involved in the Friday mishap were James F. Graham, 61, of Garland, and John R. Halle, 40, of 8 Railroad st., Clarendon. Graham failed to yield the right of way at an intersection and pulled into the side of the Halle machine.

Halle suffered lacerations of the arm and back, and was taken to Warren General Hospital for treatment. Damage to the Graham machine was estimated at $150, and to the Halle auto $100.

Mary M. Jackson, 68, of North East, and Arthur Crowell, 45, of Corry, were the operators of the vehicles which were involved in the Sunday accident. The lady was attempting a right turn onto Route 27, but she pulled too wide into the southbound lane of traffic, striking the Crowell car.

JOB HELP

If you have reached that point in life when the employer is apt to give more consideration to your birth certificate than he does to your references there is a little booklet available that might help you find a job. It is put out by the Department of Labor and Industry, and though we own one we can not divulge its deep secrets because of a paragraph prohibiting such use without permission.

There is good reason for this, however, because an out-of-context treatment might prove very misleading. It has such titles as "When You Apply for A Job", "Suitable Occupations for Men", "Suitable Occupations for Women", "Where to Look", "Where to Find Out About Jobs", "Part Time Job Possibilities", "Some Friendly Advice", "Ten Points for Success in Employment", "How to Keep Busy in Later Years".

Name of the book, "Job Help". Department of Labor and Industry, Harrisburg.

Why a cut in telephone rates is NOT in the public interest

The Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission has announced the institution of formal proceedings to investigate the reasonableness of this company's telephone rates in Pennsylvania. While no specific reductions have been mentioned, the Commission is reported to believe that our earnings are too high because the rate of return on the value of our property is 2/10 or 3/10 of 1% more than was contemplated by the Commission when it established present telephone rates in 1956. Proper reflection of increased costs of construction, wages and borrowed money since 1956 would, of course, reduce the rate of return.

We do not believe that a reduction is in the public interest.

Let's look at the record:

The cost of telephone service has increased only 31% during the past 20 years, while the cost of living has increased 110%.

Our average monthly business and residence telephone rates are lower in Pennsylvania than in our neighboring states of New York, New Jersey, Maryland and West Virginia. Our local revenue per telephone in Pennsylvania is the lowest in the Bell System.

Our toll rates for calls within Pennsylvania are lower than those of any other Bell System Company except one whose rates are the same as ours.

These rates have not produced excessive earnings.

Our average earnings for the past 14 years, in fact, have been below the level of earnings defined as "reasonable" by the Commission's decisions on our previous rate applications.

The telephone industry must compete with other industries for borrowed money, for people and for materials and supplies. Our costs for these necessities have risen as they have for other businesses. The critical difference is that, in the post-war years, our earnings position relative to that of other industries has become worse.

And consider this:

Our earnings must be adequate if our growth is to keep up with the growth of Pennsylvania.

To meet the state's growing communications needs we will need to spend over a half billion dollars in the next five years. Most of this money must come from outside sources. It will, too . . . if our earnings are what they should be.

Make no mistake about one thing:

Good earnings are important not only to us but also to the economy of Pennsylvania and its citizens.

Our yearly purchases from some 15,000 Pennsylvania firms and citizens total more than $98 million. An additional $175 million in annual payroll finds its way into the state's business communities through purchases by our employees and their families.

This is the equivalent of 273 separate businesses, each paying out a million dollars a year for wages and supplies.

Our earnings must be adequate if we are to maintain the quality of service you have every right to demand and the continual improvements you have every right to expect.

The high quality of our service and its low cost are the result of constant effort by our entire organization. When our efforts are penalized by cutting earnings that result from efficient operation, the incentive to give service which is high in quality and low in cost is undermined.

Our earnings are as big a part of our incentive as your earnings are of yours.

Incentive can work wonders for any business. It's worked wonders for us. By hard work, by aggressive selling and by bringing into the business the most up-to-date technical improvements to keep costs down, we've managed to inch our way ahead despite mounting costs up and down the line.

Where does incentive come from if we are arbitrarily penalized for efficiency?

Our views are shared by members of many regulatory bodies.

The chairman of one state's utility commission, for example, said in a recent speech:

"A regulatory body which cuts rates to the bare minimum makes the utilities that much less attractive to the investor and imposes a burden on them in competing for investment funds, with the result that they must pay constantly more for their capital . . .

"Since the increased cost of capital must ultimately be paid for by the customer, such a shortsighted regulatory policy will ultimately hurt the customer not only in respect to the quality of service but to the long-range cost he will have to pay . . .

"The public can reap a shortsighted and immediate gain with rock bottom utility rates, but the end result would be the stifling of progress and inadequate service, all leading to the road of insolvency, public discontent, and eventual public demand of government ownership. Therefore, we feel that regulation, after establishing the fair value of the used and useful property of the utility, must allow a rate which will encourage investment and in turn ever-improving utility service."

We submit these facts in the public interest.

UNION CONTROL OF PRESS

The newspapers of the nation are concerned about a proposal that would create one of those "bigs" which this nation of free enterprise must constantly guard against if it is to maintain democracy. This applies to government, industry, labor, or any other form of organized control that may prove detrimental.

The proposal to which we refer involves the formation of one large union of all who work in industries involving publishing. This would combine the writers' guild, the typographical union, and the men who make paper.

We are concerned for a reason other than the usual relationship between labor and industry. This could throttle our basic freedom of expression. Under such a set-up the press of the nation could be tied into silence.

The thought is frightening to a truly free people.

ANTIQUE CONSTITUTION

How far behind our state governments are today can be seen in the Pennsylvania constitution. The state today spends $55 million a year on various building programs, involving schools, highways, bridges, tunnels, state buildings, recreational facilities, and others.

It has bonds outstanding that total $616 million. Without these bonds we would have far less schools than we do today, a horse-and-buggy highway system, and many other inadequacies.

Yet the constitution limits borrowing authority of the state to just one million dollars!

We defeat this through authorities, of which the state has three, The General State Authority, The State Highway and Bridge Authority, and The State Public School Building Authority. In addition, almost every community, county, and township has some kind of authority going to get around the restrictions placed on borrowing power.

Some will oppose any changes in these restrictions, but others will claim that the restrictions are very expensive. The reason being that authorities lack the financial backing of the benefiting communities. They are strictly regulated and usually are established in a way that assures their solvency, but they are independent of the benefiting areas.

This means that those lending money or buying bonds are apt to charge a higher rate of interest because of the risk involved. And interest is eating us up. Every school, highway, bridge, or any structure financed by bonds costs the public approximately twice its actual value. Twice!

This means that if any community could get squared away with its needs, and could establish a capital investment fund, the price of public facilities would be reduced fifty per cent. Play that on your tax organ and you will hear a sweet tune that sings forth "Greatly Lowered Assessments".

Add up your authority bonds for all who find this method required to provide the needed services, and either reduce the interest one per cent or knock off half the price and you come up with far more than a modest savings.

And we always come back to that one, "We wouldn't run our business this way."

NORTHERN AREA SCHOOL BOARDS STUDIES LANGUAGE LABORATORY

An actual demonstration of a recently acquired language laboratory, which is being used in the modern foreign language program of Eisenhower high school, was a special feature of the October meeting of the Northern Area Joint School Bd. The equipment which comprises this curriculum-improvement device was purchased from L. C. Vath of Sharon, and its total purchase price of $1,300 will be paid by Federal funds for 50 per cent of the cost and local funds for the remaining 50 per cent.

Mr. Schultz, French instructor at Eisenhower, board members at Eisenhower, board members actually participated in a lesson in beginning French by actual use of the equipment.

Directors considered a report concerning the payment of the annual rental of the Eisenhower School building. The State Building Authority had submitted a receipt for the payment of $79,638. School officials reported that an application for the State's share of that rental had been processed, and payment from the State should be forthcoming soon. The sum of state reimbursement, which is due because of the above payment, is $48,712.

School bus training institutes which provide actual laboratory type training in school bus safety, principles, and policy have now been conducted for the students of all Northern Area elementary schools. A set of accepted guide rules for use in the area is now being prepared and will be provided to each student. Plans have been formulated to carry out a similar instruction program among students in the high school within the next two weeks.

Upon recommendation of the ways and means committee a number of decisions were accepted which were in keeping with recommendations which had been made by the county superintendent, Mr. John Mallery, Jr. Mr. Mallery made his suggestions during the October as a result of his investigation of the Auditors' Report for the 1959-60 year. Approval was given to a record form which will be used at each telephone station in the system to record all toll calls. A resolution requesting the Bell Telephone Co. and the Public Utilities Commission to make the Northern Area community a toll-free telephone zone when it initiates its service in the Sugar Grove - Chandler's Valley area was unanimously approved.

Continuation of the present cafeteria and gasoline use records was authorized. The present athletic program and salary schedule for certified employees were continued as they exist.

It was further decided to investigate the use of a certified public accountant for future audits of the Northern Area accounts. The committee was asked to explore the possibility of changing the retainer agreement with the school solicitor to insure his presence at each regular meeting.

Community Chest Far Short Of Goal

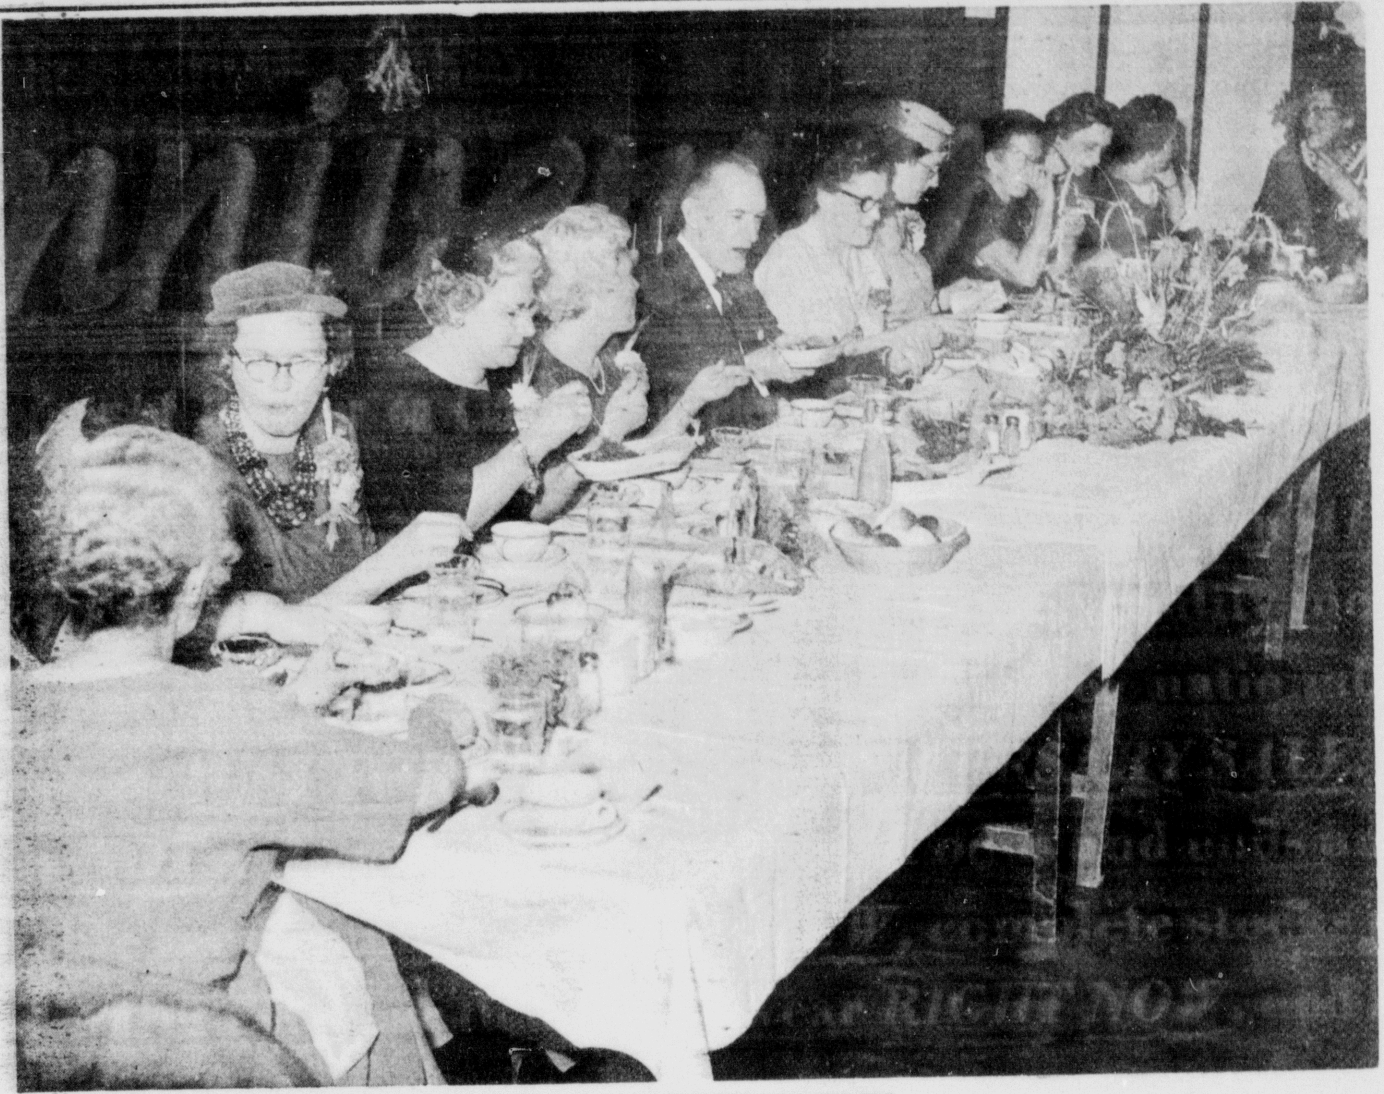

Although Warren's Community Chest Red Feather campaign was scheduled to end Monday a tabulation late that day revealed that only $58,000 had been turned in toward the goal of $93,500, indicating that many workers have not completed their assignments.

General chairman Edgar Pendleton said the drive will continue until all reports are in and he expects the Red Feather thermometer to rise rapidly toward the top as the incomplete returns start to come in.

More than $50,000 of the amount collected so far came from the industrial and special gifts division which started campaigning prior to the general drive. The breakdown by divisions shows industrial, $42,000; special gifts, $9,500; retail and wholesale business, $1,900; professional, $1,100; public service, $3,000; and residential, $615.

Last year the Chest raised $82,000 for its ten local participating agencies and this year's goal calls for an 8 per cent increase. It is still too early and returns are still too incomplete to predict whether this year's drive will be successful.

Chairman Pendleton urges all volunteer workers to turn in their completed kits to their team captains before the end of this week.

WARREN HIGH DRAGON BAND used the political theme to carry out their musical program at the halftime during Saturday's game at Warren Memorial Field.

HAULS IT IN. Charlie Allen, the tall Academy end, snares a Cermak aerial on a play that covered 78 yards to the Warren ten-yard-stripe. The Erie lads blanked the Dragons, 12-0, in Warren's first independent contest of the season.

THE BLOCKING EFFORTS of the Erie Academy Lions is noticeable here as Freddy Delfino, fullback, moves the ball to the two-yard-line before he was stopped by the Dragons' forward wall. One play later, he smashed over the goal for Erie's second score.

Ford Harvest Time in Mid-America

A wheat field sprouted new cars and an entire city reaped the harvest. That's about what happened recently when Ford Division of Ford Motor Company loaned one of its new model cars or trucks to every vehicle owner in Flora Ill., for use for a week before they were publicly introduced. Townsfolk streamed out — about 1,500 are in the scene above — to "take delivery" of the massive fleet of cars, all painted white, and blue trucks. The project required 1,374 cars and more than 200 trucks. Selected by Ford as a site for its gigantic 1961 model national press preview and consumer test, Flora is located close to the official population center of the U.S. The 6,000 residents of the southern Illinois city celebrated the week-long transformation into "Ford Town U.S.A." and everybody, including competing auto dealers, drove new Fords.

DRIVEN OUT of bounds on the Warren two-yard-line is the Erie Academy Lions' quarterback, Jim Cermak. Cermak had brought the ball to that point during a touchdown drive by the visitors in the third period of play. Making the tackle is Dragon Dave Green.

HEAD-TO-HEAD COMBAT. Erie's Jerry Ward is pictured here being brought to the turf by Ron Seder of the Blue and White. The speedy Lion halfback's run to the Erie 38 netted the Lions a first down with four minutes remaining in the opening stanza.
